

Call for Student Poster Presentations: Stormwater and Water Quality

Pearl South Padre Resort, April 9-12, 2014
South Padre Island, Texas

Texas A&M University-Kingsville and the Lower Rio Grande Valley TPDES Stormwater Task Force comprised of 18 local municipal and county governments are hosting a student poster competition at the Stormwater Management Conference centered on water quality management. The objective of the competition is to provide undergraduate and graduate students focused on water quality engineering with an opportunity to showcase their research and achievements to the professional audience at our Conference 2014.

The LRGV 16th annual Stormwater Conference is a venue that joins dozens of professionals responsible for stormwater management, including municipal and tribal managers, state and federal regulators, engineers, consultants, highway and heavy-construction contractors, developers, compliance professionals, design professionals, researchers, nonprofit professionals, and officials at special sites, such as ports, airports, and military bases. Stormwater management is a fast-changing discipline and TAMUK is the only professional conference and exposition in the LRGV where the attendee can learn about the latest stormwater program management innovations, BMPs performance case studies, research, technology, and services. This conference is the discipline's regional networking, education, and training center. This conference also features exhibition of stormwater equipment and technologies in one place.
